Kennecott MAP Project

Desert News featured the MAP Project in a recent article. Kennecott Utah Copper is in the process of building a new plant that will produce 10 percent of the world's molybdenum, a valuable metal that goes by the nickname "molly". This additive is used to help steel become stronger. In order to process these metals, Kennecott began the MAP

(Molybdenum Autoclave Processing) project in 2010. When this project is completed it will allow Kennecott to produce the metals as a final product instead of shipping raw concentrates to other companies for final processing, a feat that Kennecott has not been able to do before.

Mountain Crane has been involved with this project by providing crane and rigging support for numerous contractors on site. Several pipelines have been built off site, hauled to the project site, and set into place utilizing our Grove GMK 275 Ton and Liebherr LTM 200 ton all terrain cranes. Crawler cranes and rough terrain cranes have also been utilized for this project.

Mountain Crane's engineering team has been crucial to this project by providing the necessary lift plans and drawings to accomplish these difficult lifts.

Employee Spotlight

Russ Jumps has worked as one of Mountain Crane's master mechanics for three years. He can often be found servicing equipment in the Midwestern U.S. He found his way into the crane industry by wanting to advance his skills. His favorite part about his job is being recognized and rewarded for doing a good job.

Russ is originally from St. Joseph, Missouri. He has two little boys, ages 9 and 13, who he enjoys visiting anytime he goes back home. In his spare time, Russ likes to see what he can do with cars and motorcycles.

The picture on the right is Russ's service truck that he has fully equipped to do his work. He takes excellent care of his truck (and our equipment) and always does a great job for Mountain Crane wherever he goes.
